BERLIN HOPES FOR CUT IN ANNUITIES

Beer, Inheritance and Capital Taxes Increased-Income Tax Up to $6000 Reduced

BY WIRELESS TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITO BERLIN—The draft of the Reich Donetz Basin budget for the coming financial year, commencing on April 1, just sub-mitted by the Cabinet to the Federal Council, shows that the Reich will be able to meet its increased repara-tion obligations, as S. Parker Gilbert

Following the present tendency here to emphasize Germany's eco-nomic difficulties in view of the coming expert conference the Minister of Finance, Dr. Wilhelm Köhler, in commenting on the draft budget, expressed his doubt whether Germany's economics would be able to bear the burden of increased taxation for more than one year. He, therefore, described the budget for the coming financial year as a tran-sitory one, and hoped the experts

It is often assome novelty that cannot be duplicated and once seen is ended. We asked him what these acts were gooring to do after they had been filmed and recorded and sent broadcast throughout the country.

He said that this was already turning out to be a problem of major importance. Many acts have been recorded and if the act uses the same idea it can get no houses, for a large part of the public has already seen it at the motion picture houses. He said those acts which had variety could change songs, etc., and go along nicely. In this case the pic-tures help them for people want to see the performers in person but in something different. He said it would work up a special act for recording and filming if they were to protect themselves. As to those 50 to 100 acts already taken, that is a problem quite equal to the musicians. Where are talking pictures going? That is the most important question and the most difficult one to answer Dr. De Forest says that talking pic-tures should not be confused with either motion pictures or the stage. He considers them a new and indiout its own technique. There will always be a place for the silent pantomime picture, always a place for the stage production, and a new place for the talking picture. New Technique Needed

In working out its problems, producers will probably find this view-point more helpful than the idea of a picture development. When movies first appeared, all attempts to carry over stage practice into this new medium met with poor results. Finally a new technique was developed and the art progressed. This may be the answer to the talking picture

Such questions are now being asked as, "How much dialogue should there be in a picture? Should music be played in the background of a dia-logue or not, in order to lend color? Are mere 'prop' sounds in the middle of a musical accompaniment good or do they break up the continuity of the music and thought?" These and many similar questions are now awaiting answers.

Technically speaking, engineers in general feel that the film recording is engineering practice than record recording and that it will ulti-mately be the more generally used. The records wear, they can be easily broken and they introduce a surface noise which must be filtered out. This cannot be entirely done and it has a tendency to filter out some of the music or voice

Films vs. Records

The record advocates, however say that the film, depending as it does upon delicate gray shadings, can be easily spoiled by getting the least be advisable for vaudeville stars to bit of dirt or oil upon it, which will be difficult to remove, while a record can be brushed off in a few moments. There is no doubt that the delicate shadings of the Movietone film type of job demand the most careful handling in developing and printing.

Any shade of darkness or light added to the film will of course change the character of the music. Fox is to be congratulated on the excellent work done to date on this a more rapidly moving sound track, which in turn permits the higher frequencies. Any further speeding up of the films is likely to prove impractical, as then a film would run but a short time before the reel would have to be changed and there would be other disadvantages.

While the records may have the higher frequencies, a comparison between Movietone and Vitaphone in a theater shows no noticeable difference. It would then appear that even though the high frequencies are on the record, the reproducing apparatus does not pick them up and lem, has gone to a solid black line of amplify them properly. The resolution asserted that the "historic policy" of the Presbyterian Church has been "to favor and join in movement for church unity," and concluded with the proposal that the General Assembly, through its com-mittee on church co-operation and union, "meet the advances of the Methodist and Episcopal churches with the utmost hospitality and to do all in their power to bring to pass this much to be desired reunion of evangelical churches."

The Rev. Dr. Henry Sloane Coffin, president of the Union Theological Seminary, who offered the resolution, said he had studied the matter for some time as head of a committee appointed to look into it.

The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church at its last meeting and the General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church last October both made overtures for such a union, he said, and the action of the Presbytery was, therefore, a move to meet the other Sheets, pillow cases, towels and even Rayon spreads—all of these made right at our very door—all of these, of Southern make, selling at specially low prices during our Annual January Sale of Linens. In the past few years the South has become amazingly active and outstandingly productive. It is keeping the pace. In many ways it is setting the pace. The growth of a community or a country comes largely through mutual patronage. Realizing this, the J. M. High Co. is favoring Southern products, wherever it can do so without sacrificing quality.

You will like these Southern products for many reasons, but chiefly because they are of a fine grade, and because they sell at a low price—especially low during our January Sale.

A Winter Sport: Planning Color Effects in Your Next Garden

Chicago

ERE is a winter sport for gardeners about to plan their next year's garden. Visit a park conservatory or pause before any florist's window where tropical air plants fiame their beauty. Note how in a single flower is blended, for example, the gray-green of foliage the purplish pink of spike and the ultramarine blue of flower. Then jot down these fresh hues which harmonize so well in the bloom and use the color scheme for next season's glorious border, matching each tint

August Koch, chief florist of the Garfield Park Con-lavenders, however, they take on a Perhaps a whole row of geraniums servatory in Chicago, with 40 years' pleasing and restful quality. The must come out again to give a bit experience in his art here and in France, explained some of his technique in an interview. By studying single tropic blooms, he said, he has learned how high colors which many gardeners shun in their borders and bedding plans can be used with harmonious effect.

Many people are oversensitive to red, this authority believes. They make a mistake in banning it from their flower beds. In tropical air plants, the florist observed this color in daring and successful combinaborder, for instance, scarlet and orange may be expressed with tulips, and lavender with pansies.

This garden expert finds another authority for the use of strong colors in the autumn woodlands. When interviewed he had just returned from a trip through the October Ozarks. The scarlets, magentas and orange tints of the maples had entranced him. He had rejoiced in the bold pigments of wild plums and dogwoods, not overlooking the plumes of the goldenrod. "I wished," he said, "that those

The Technique

This color lover has worked out a definite technique for blending floral hues. The rules are not unlike those governing musical composition or poetry. A border or bed must above all have unity. Uncommon color

London, Eng. it grows in England it does not require a degree of heat that can only be provided by an expensive and troublesome heating apparatus. A cool greenhouse with, in frosty weather, a little extra warmth, easily supplied by a small oil stove or lamp, will keep the plants quite sate.

Water is the chief need, plenty of water during the growing and flowering period. When that is over, and the leaves commence to turn yellow and fall off, one must diminish the watering and finally discontinue it altogether, laying the pots on their sides out of doors, until July. Then is the time to repot the corms, mixing with the soil some dried cow manure and mortar rubbish. Once the plants are in their new homes, watering begins again, increas ing with the growth of the plant. Nothing, perhaps, in greenhouse beauty, is so lovely as a bank of these plants in full bloom; masses of white, pink and rich crimson blossoms with their graceful forms and rich shining foliage. One has to be careful about three things. First, when potting, only slightly embed the corn in the soil, just enough to hold it firmly. Second, the plants, especially in the growing stage, should be kept close

What About the Lilacs

By J. HORACE McFARLAND

By J. HORACE McFARLAND

VERYONE knows the lilac, of course, and most who have found it running wild about an old abandoned farmhouse will insist that it has always been there, and therefore that it is a native American shrub.

But this is not the fact. Seemingly the common lilac, which takes the name of Syringa vulgaris—though it is anything but vulgar—is of Bulgarian origin, and I suspect that it came to America very early, when our Anglo-Saxon forbears found that they could have in the new country to which they came to days in the fact. These lilacs are all based on the old Syringa vulgaris, and in general have its habit of upright growth, country to which they came to seek true freedom, the treasures of the home land. It is quite certain that George Washington liked illacs, these spread by shoots from the root, because he had them and I success. because he had them, and I suspect and thus the clump becomes thick that the other great formative states—and heavy, in time needing either to man, Thomas Jefferson, also fond of be cut back by the armful of these plants and constantly writing about shoots or to have the larger growth had lilacs about his own cut off so that the height of the plant

But the lilac has gone through a metamorphosis at the hands of plant be inserted. The lilacs in commerce in the United States are grown in the United States are grown of their on their own roots—much the either on their own roots—much the better plan—or are budded on the common privet or on the common lilac. If the plant is on privet, the "suckers," or shoots around the main stem, will be of privet, and these show themselves and can easily be removed. If, on the other hand, the fine variety one is buying has been budded on common lilac, the suckers from the root will be common lilac and they will tend to dwarf the desired variety, and in fact to extinguish it. I would not want to accept a plant budded on lilac, but would much prefer the plant on privet if I could not get own-root. The latter takes about a year longer to get started, but is worth much more when one gets it. All its suckers will be of the variety itself, and are very much to be preferred.

That present-day greatest plant explorer, E. H. Wilson, now keeper of the Arnold Arboretum, collected a good many other lilacs in China, from which country he has brought so many garden treasures for the United States. Some of these ought some time get into commerce. Long before he went to China we had some species such as Syringa persica, Syringa villosa and Syringa josikar, blooming later than the common lilac and with flowers of an unpleasant fragrance. Mr. Wilson brought in a group of lilacs new to this country, and of the finest possibilities, though they have not yet been taken up by the hybridizers. I may mention as best among these Syringa pubescens, which has the delightful quality of blooming all over the plant down to the ground, and which Professor Sargent seemed nence, Victor Lemoine of Nancy, who put the lilac through its paces. Cady '29, defense, and Paul Curtis '29, right wing, are the other members of this year's team who, with Palmer, played last season as regulars. The last two named are in the same positions this year and have been going even better this year than last, Curtis having starred several times on the scoring end. He is not as fast as Cady but he is huskier and stronger. Consequently he plays a type of game of Cady. He won his place by exceptional all-around ability.

Sophomores Show Well

Wilson won his major Y by playing against Harvard last year. He was, therefore, expected to play a great game this year. The showing of the two sophomores, though, has exceeded all expectations. Luce has been a whirlwind, after a slow beginning in his first game, and Farrel, at goal, has made an equally impressive showing. The latter is the best, or at least the most consistent, goal tender Yale has had since Capt. G. A. Jenkins '25. impetus needed to turn back the charge of John Harvard's representatives. Last season was the most palphble example of this. Until the Harvard series started late in the season, Yale had lost only one college game and was headed for an intercollegiate champlonship. Harvard spoiled that ambition and expectation by beating Yale two straight games.

This year, it again looks as if Yale would go to the last stretch at least with a fine record, possibly with a spotless one. Experience has taught Yale not to be too confident until after its series with Harvard.

Palmer's Loss Felt

Water-Polo Score 46 to 19

The water-polo game was in favor of City College.

It was the lack of good sprinters that really defeated the Columbia team. Its representatives took first place in three events, when William C. Gaynor '30, won the back stroke, with Frank Bowden '29, second, and Rene E. Faure '29, and Charles J. Oberist '30, were first and third in the breast stroke race, with H. D. W. McClure '31, the winner of the distance race. Gaynor could do no better than second in the 50, with Adolf er than second in the 50, with Adolf Gobel Jr. '31, third, and Domenico Savola '30, a new recruit since last week, was second in the hundred, with two City College men filling the other two places, Charles R. Booth '29, the other Columbia starter, being a poor

Then in the relay race, Coach Edward J. Kennedy inserted Bowden, really a distance man, in place of either Luke Ryan '31, or William Lancaster '30, who have held the third position in previous meets, and while he made a good showing, slowness on the turns by both Leon M. Prince Jr. '31, the second man, and Bowden, made it difficult for the other two, Gobel and Gaynor, to overcome the handicap.

garded as a sure first for John Kraft '29, Irving Goldman '30 of City College, developed a skill which he has never exhibited before, and beat out the Columbia find, by the margin of three and one-half points. Loss of First Two Conference Games Makes Task of Repeating Greater

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONIT LOS ANGELES, Calif.—Although undefeated in its practice season games six in number, University of Southern California did not get away to a good start in the Pacific Coast Conference of basketball teams, losing its only games to date to University of California, 43 to 38 and 33 to 27. However, the scores show that last year's championship team is not far below its 1928 form and may repeat as Coach L. B. Calland, who won a Pa cific Coast title in his first season as Southern California mentor, realizes that it is more difficult to retain a championship than to win one. But he has available an entire team of veterans who have won their monograms while three of them played regularly on the 1928 title-winning five. Capt. L. B. Thomas '29 is playing his last year with the quintet and his aggressiveness is caught by his teammates, who have played fast and smoothly. Another week or so and the team should be in its finest form.

J. W. Lehners '30 is the other guard. He, too, played regularly last year, and was one of the main reasons why the Trojans maintained such a fine defensive average. J. P. Mortensen '30, who is now playing center, was selected All-Coast forward on the mythical court team last year. He is expected to be the most brilliant man on the Trojan team this season. Calland has shifted him from his regular posi-tion, so that Mortenson's 6ft. 2in. can be used to the best advantage. As a more in 1928. Mortensen was one of the Conference stars. Every coach that observed him in action voted him an extremely able player.

Offensive Needs Attention H. T. Cano '30 and A. T. Nibley '30 have starred in the forward positions so far this year. Both were substitutes last year but played enough to be awarded monograms. It is the offen-sive part of the game that is troubling Calland, but the results, in number of baskets, speak well for the Trojan for-

Cano is just under 6 ft. and is exceptionally fast at getting the ball away on goal attemps. Nibley is shorter and lighter, but almost as fast. It is problematical whether or not Lowry McCaslin '30, a regular in 1928, will attempt to regain his former posiion at forward. Doubtless if he could display his last year's ability the Trojan hopes for another champion-

POLAND TO STAGE WORLD'S SKI MEET

Features of Contests to Be Similar to Olympics

NEW YORK-The annual interna tional ski contest sponsored by the Federation International de Ski, will this year be held in the Polish Tatra Mountains. In connection with the tenth anniversary of Polish inde-pendence, and following the invita-tion of the Polish Ski Association, ex-tended to all the nations of the world, CANADIENS are reported to be after Kenneth Doraty, Kitchener forward in the Canadian Professional Hockey League. Doraty was with the Regina Pats Juniors in 1924-25 and turned professional with the Portland Rosebuds of the Pacific Coast League the next season. In 1926-27 he was sold to Chicago of the N. H. L. and farmed out to Minneapolls in the American Hockey Association. He played with Kitchener last year and at present is leading the Can-pro league goal scorers.

Percy Jackson, Vancouver goalle who has created such an impression in the Pacific Coast Hockey League, was finally defeated by Seattle, 2 to 0. Friday. Previous to this game Jackson had shut out the Eskimos four times and allowed them one goal in another game. The scores in favor of Vancouver have been 2-0, 1-0, 2-0, 3-1, and 3-0.

The meet, which will last six days, will take place in Zakopane, one of the most fashionable of the Polish winter resorts in the Tatra Mountains, from Feb. 5 to 10. Judging by the number of nations which have alweedy registered as ready registered as contestants, this year's event will surpass all previous contests. The list of entries already includes 15 nations: Great Britain, France, Germany, Czechoslovakia, Rumania, Poland, Sweden, Switzerland, Italy, Austria, Jugoslavia, Hun-gary, Norway, Latvia and Finland. The Polish Ski Association is making every effort to have also representa-tives of the United States, Canada and Japan participate.

Besides the contestants and official guests, over 40,000 tourists and ski fans from all over the world, are expected to attend. For thousands of these visitors it will be the first op-portunity to become acquainted with Poland's ideal skiing grounds. The features of the meet will be similar to those of the Olympic Games: 50 and 18 kilometer races, MRS. JONES AND MISS TURPIE WIN do appear.

By this time it is probably known to most of our readers that no good reason has ever been discovered for giving the name of an English town, Lowestoft, to Chinese porcelain. It is the almost universal opinion of those best informed that this ware was made in many small places within a few hundred miles of Canton and taken in its white state to that great seaport which was in direct contact with the shipping of many countries. Orders received from abroad were there decorated according to the directions of the buyer. In this manner the coats of arms of many English families found their places on the cups and saucers, plates, pitchers, and other dishes which are on view in this Boston

Through the courtesy of Mr. Jacobs, who is in charge of this showing, we were able to see the rare volume entitled, "Chinese Armorial Porcelain," written by Mr. is of the greatest value to anyone who desires to get the most reliable facts relating to this ware.

A Huguenot Refugee

Lamerie, or de Lamerie as he sometimes styles himself in his invoices of plate, was a French Protestant craftsman, who left France after the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes in 1685. More than 400,000 of these French Protestants, it is said, took refuge in England, Holland, Switzerland, and even America.

tined to become the greatest silver-smith in England, started business 'att ye Golden Ball," in Great Windmill Street, a stone's throw from Pic-There he was assisted by his daughters, only employing a few men. The fact that he was in business for 40 years, combined with his pro-lific industry, accounts for the large number of pieces still existing bearing one or other of his maker's marks. The Mansion House, for example, which may be called London's City Hall and is the official home of the Lord Mayor, owns more than 200 Lamerie dinner-plates.

Prices in High Figures The smallest piece of plate made by this great craftsman now generally commands several hundreds of pounds sterling when put up for sale in the auction-room and is the object of the keenest rivalry among both American and British amateur and professional collectors. No old silver collection, indeed, is considered complete nowadays without at least one example of Lamerie's work.

The Duke of Devonshire is the proud owner, in his wonderful collecion of heirloom silver, of a beautiful Lamerie cup and cover. Lord Northbourne possesses three oblong are of vital importance as forming the basis on which a notable work has just been written. It is "Early." American Wrought Iron," by Albert H. Sonn, with 320 plates and drawings by the author. Each 12½ by. 91/2-inch page of drawings is both artistically excellent and conscien-tiously accurate in detail. Executed in pencil and reproduced in photo-gravure, they leave nothing to be Belmaison offers two very unusual advantages rarely found in conjunction. The astonishing size of its stocks, so great that our clients repeatedly comment on the fact that they make it possible to furnish an entire house or apartment in any good style, without the necessity of having a single piece especially made. With literally hundreds of pieces ready to choose from, and have re-moved at once to the interiors they are henceforth to occupy. And the fact that each piece is as carefully made as if it had been a special order. Indeed in every case it is practically a custom-made example, the same care and thought bestowed on every detail of its workmanship, choice of material and beauty of finish that gave importance and assurance of survival to its antique

The Intrinsic Merit and Decorative Importance of Belmaison Furniture

Antique furniture owes the esteem in which it is held to intrinsic qualities that deserve to be perpetuated. Belmaison Reproductions are made by skilled crafts men by hand processes similiar to the old. They bear compari-son without disadvantage when placed alongside the finest work of the 17th and 18th Centuries. And their decorative importance is of the same order because they are faithful replicas of carefully chosen old designs . . . in many cases copies of actual antique originals in Au Quatrieme's possession. Every piece has such character and individuality as † gave the original its distinction.

The Great Numbers of Overstuffed Pieces Covered with the Correct Materials

To be remarked also in Belmaison's collections are the quite extraordinary numbers of excel-lent overstuffed pieces covered with materials that are right from the decorative standpoint for various types of interiors. Crisp English chintzes in blithe reproductions of gay old Georgian and Regency designs. Bro-catelles in Renaissance patterns and colors. And cool restful moires in admirable shades of beige and gray. On French and English drawing-room chairs of 18th Century design are used gray, green, crimson and oyster-white damasks, velvets and antique satins. The more informal examples are covered with Provencal quilted petticoats, with toiles, chintzes and French percales. All the overstuffed pieces are also to be had in satine ready for whatever type of slip-cover may be desired.

The Variety and Unusual Character of the Styles

Belmaison stresses the fact that all the good styles of four countries and three centuries are represented in its collections in a diversity and with a selective character that we believe cannot be matched anywhere else. Only examples of unusual excellence are included, whatever their genre. Carved English oak, authentically Jacobean and Caro-lean, for fine oak panelled rooms, and the simple but unhackneyed pieces for beamed and plastered cottage interiors. Fine 18th Century English walnut and mahog-any dining and breakfast room tables. High backed Queen Anne dining chairs, and the various designs in mahogany, introduced by Chippendale, Sheraton and Hepplewhite, including beautiful examples of the fascinating rib-bon-back which Chippendale him-

AFTER a delay of nearly two months, due—as I said in a previous article—to the inopportune archæological labors underaken in the autumn in the foundations of the venerable hall—the symphony concerts of the "Augusteo" have at last reopened their doors. Several new works have figured on these first programs.

The most important (in dimension, if not in actual worth) of these novelties was the oratorio "Oratio Vespertina" of the abbě Lorenzo Perosi. This first performance was exclusively limited to Italian territory. It must even be said that today it is especially a Roman success. It would take too long here to attempt to analyze the reasons for this success, now confined within the walls of a single town. It is probable that these reasons are not all of a musical nature. On this score, it must be remembered that Perosi spent the years 1911 to 1927 writing practically nothing, and has only recently started to compose again.

It would be difficult to say that Perosi's music can today find justification in the huge movement that

Praised by Rolland

The case of the abbé Perosi is singular. His début, when, about 1897-98, his first "oratori" were heard, was sensational, and he was greeted as a genius (he was then about 25). Romain Rolland devoted to him one of his most dithyrambic articles, and declared that, with the coming of Perosi "the winter which had hung for so long over Italian music was in a year."

In a we faith, which may undoubtedly render this music sympathetic and even beneficial. But the faults of this for their natural vulgarity by passing themselves off as "proletariates."

But the concerto as a whole is none the less pleasing, and it y to find an excuse for their natural vulgarity by passing themselves off as "proletariates."

lived in conditions of perfect serenity with his art, in this sense, that he has never known the troubles, indecisions and trials that have made artistic development so difficult to many of his musical compatriots.

A New Concerto The new Concerto is a work on a pretty large scale. It presents—without adding anything much that is new—the customary characteristics of Castelnuovo's music: charm, freshness, technical skill, ease in the discursive flow and perfect natural-ness in the sound-thought. The work contains frequent allusions to national folk-lore, but I cannot say that it is the happiest side of the compo-sition. It is difficult to be able to discern, in the matter of borrowing from the popular, between certain elements which actually spring from the heart of the race and constitute even, the essence of it, and other elements which are purely of bourgeois origin, and try to find an excuse for their natural vulgarity by passern concerto that carries on the type of Chopin-Mendelssohn. Admitting There is certainly a genuine sense that this type of concerto can still of dramatic effect, and it is possible find a reason for existing today, that Perosi might—if he had not been Castelnuovo's composition is destined

COME improvements were discernible when the German Grand Opera Company, continu-

"Ring" cycle, "as at Bayreuth," submitted its "Walkfire" at the Manhattan Opera House on the afternoon of Jan. 16. The orchestra, under the direction of Dr. Walter Rabl, approached nearer than in previous performanes to a lucid utterance, and there were moments when the violins achieved a full-bodied tone. There also were moments of instru-mental murkiness, raggedness and faulty intonation, especially in the wind sections.

The stage management and the The stage management and the stage business again presented some novel details. If this is the way the thing is done at Bayreuth, we have been sadly misled in the various American opera houses. The Siegmund of Willy Zilken and the Sieglinde of Anna Scheffler-Schorr, for example, carried out their duties in the first act in a very original man-ner, apparently quite unaware that the Volsung motif bore any relation to them. The fireplace seemed to be quite cold, and the sword-hilt failed to shine when called upon by the orchestra—until, apparently as an afterthought, Sieglinde flashed at it intermittently an obviously electric torch. These methods did not stri'us as an improvement on those we had been accustomed to. Nor were we convinced by this performance that there had been sacrilege in the deletion of those parts of the score which were restored by the visitors.

Mary Dierks, though hardly a glamorous Brünnhilde, sang with con-siderable beauty of tone and with much vigor. Richard Gross had a clear conception of Wotan, and voacquitted himself creditably. Mme. Metzger-Lattermann was a sufficiently domineering Fricka, but gave us reason to believe that her Great music, I say, by proof of quantity and quality—to use terms wherewith a recent French essayist sums up romanticism and classicism. For "Amériques" strikes me as rich in historic implication and sentimental content, and at the same time as firm in construction and clear, balanced and elegant in outline. It holds within its involved sonorities the emotional experience of the seventeenth, eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, while consolidating in its strict and simple architecture the skill for technical organization of the present day. It was with a kind of regret, 1 must confess, that I saw a copy of the Curwen edition of "Amériques" being inked over so pitilessly, and only for the reason that the work is too magnificent in its tonal plan to be universally practicable. For my part, I can scarcely believe that a European public desirous of knowing about Varèse and his music would be gratified by any such come-down. But "Amériques" remains unchanged in idea, Mr. Varèse assures me: and besides, there is such a thing as cost of production in concert-giving as in other affairs. Upon my asking him what a program could be prepared for here, with "Amériques" the central number, he replied:

"Two thousand dollars, a good orchestra, the right conductor, and sufficient rehearsals."

Three centuries of sentiment and the last word in artistic judgment; the romance of the Conquistadores of classic song, and $2000 to pay. The launching of an American sympho in Paris on such terms would be, methinks, a bargain.

The Ox in New England

THE "Connecticut Plowman," a large canvas from the brush of Edward Volkert, is an example of this artist's vigorous handling. In a sublime rustic scene we see a farmer directing a mighty team of oxen, yoked to a plow, turning up the soil in early spring, with a luxuriant valley in view, and great distant hills surrounding them. He gives a true interpretation of his subject, and it is genuinely original.

Mr. Volkert, pre-eminently an animal painter, is distinguished for his paintings were chiefly of cattle when motoring in Connecticut, he is holding exhibitions in different cities this season, and many visitors viewing these galleries have asked this question, which is uppermost, then and there. This was the beginning of his interest in these ginning of his interest in these devotion, expressing his high ideals in joyful unfoldment, controlled consubject, and it is genuinely original.

Thalictrum Dipterocarpum

I can find no more familiar or endearing title given you You tiny globes of daintiness, Hanging from your slender stems For all the world Like facry Chinese lanterns strung From a tall, supple, swaying mast To celebrate a gay festivity. Opening wide, yet shyly, Bring to view a clustering group of stamens Hanging-just the quaintest variation

In the type of lantern. Lanterns for a decoration! Yea, I will plant you the sweetest, loveliest part Of all my garden. There where you will catch the sunbeams planting, And the wind's voice as he wanders In among you.

There throughout the days of summer Robed in radiant purple beauty, You will give me gayest greeting. Wave me graceful, eager greeting, And I will know you by a new name, By the name of Chinese lanterns.

STOCKS MOVE FORWARD IN A VIGOROUS WAY

J. S. Steel Reaches Highest Price in History—Some Irregularity

NEW YORK, Jan. 19 (A)—Opera-ions for the advance were again car-ied on in vigorous fashion on the tock market today under the leader-hip of United States Steel, which was nee more boosted to a new high price or all time.

nce more boosted to a new high price or all time.
Considerable week-end profit taking ropped out, however, and imparted ome irregularity.
The bulls seized upon the drop in all money to 6 per cent, which rate arried over the week-end, in the face of the large increase in brokers' loans, is an excuse for a demonstration, but measiness over the credit situation till persisted, with time money again omewhat firmer, and the public was nellned to stay on the side lines.
Trading was only moderately active, ithough a number of transactions of 1000 to 10,000 were recorded. Total aless were only about 2,300,000 shares or the abbreviated session.
The day's business news was rather colorless. An advance of 25 cents a con in steel scrap at Chicago gave burther evidence of the strong position of the steel industry. Kansas City Southern, one of the first railroads to report total income for 1928, showed net operating income of $7.334.875 for the year, an increase of $50,760 from 1927. Another small shipment of gold from Canada, amounting to $1,000,000, was announced.

from Canada, amounting to $1,000,000, was announced.
United States Steel was the outstanding feature of the day, shooting up to the unprecedented price of 189, an overnight gain of nearly nine points, and a gain for the week of more than 22 points. The issue was heavily bought, many blocks of 5000 shares changing hands. Rumors of unexpectedly good earnings for 1928, and an increased or extra dividend, have been current for some time, and the sharp gains of the last two days have brought talk of a stock dividend. Coppers, utilities, amusement and steel shares were strong, while oils and proton larged Rossia Insurance have brought talk of a stock dividend.

International Telephone convertible 4½s jumped into new high ground today in the otherwise slumbering bond market. Traders seemed reluctant to make any new commitments despite easier call money conditions.

The Anaconda issues—6s and 7s—advanced in sympathy with the stock, while Chile Copper 5s yielded under selling pressure. Youngstown Sheet & Tube 5s were among the other industrials to show strength.

There was little trading in the rail There was little trading in the rail group, with Erie 5s moving up fractionally. With the exception of the International Telephone issue, which crossed 114, the utilities were quiet and steady. In the oils, Standard of New York advanced.

MIDWEST TRADE ABOVE NORMAL

Wholesale and Retail Business Up-Steel and Packing Industries Gain

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR CHICAGO, Jan. 19—Eearly January trade in this section, both wholesale and retail, was better than normal for this season, according to the latest studies coming to hand, and middle West merchants are more confident regarding the spring sales outlook than regarding the spring sales outlook than in past years.

The exposition at the Furniture Mart in Chicago was well attended by buyers and store representatives, and the shoe style show is expected to be followed by a substantial increase in mid-west wholesale shoe activities. Wholesale dry goods houses have experienced unusually active buying by retailers.

perienced unusually active buying by retailers.

A few of the trade groups have entered 1929 in less satisfactory shape. Building permits have fallen off, and automobile sales, while still better than a year ago, are slowing up in advance of the Chicago automobile show. The steel industry reports a large volume of new business and an advanced rate ingot production.

Improvement in the packing industry was evidenced by the earnings statement of two or the "Big Four" for the last fiscal year, issued in the last few days, showing marked improvement over recent years.

few days, showing marked improvement over recent years.

Cattle prices have shown some irregularity, despite lighter receipts than a year ago. Hog prices are holding fairly firm around the highest prices of the season. Grain prices are stronger, and attracted larger country offerings of corn.

Security prices have shown a degree of irregularity in the day-to-day movements. Radio stocks have made the best display of group activity during the last two weeks. Record business done during 1928 by practically all companies in this industry and the feeling of optimism over the outlook for 1929 is the predominating market factor in the movement of prices of radio stocks.

factor in the movement of prices of radio stocks.

Offering of new stock issues has been in fair volume only, and bond financing has been the lowest in several months. The money rate hovers around 6 to 7 per cent, at a season when cheaper money is the usual thing.

NEW OIL INVESTMENT TRUST

NEW YORK, Jan. 19—A new investment trust with initial capital of about $100,000,000, formed to hold securities of various oil companies, is in final stager of organization. Banking quarters understand Blair & Co., Inc., will head this new trust. Public offering is looked for in the next 10 days. Initial capital of approximately $100,000,000 is to be raised through issuance of about $,000,000 sharer at a price around $35. Capital lineup is expected to be entirely in one class of stock with 10,000,00 authorized shares, of which initial offering will represent about one-third.

The Canadian National Railways reports its total revenue freight loading in 1928 were 3,195,422 cars, an increase of 288,521 cars, or 9,9 per cent over the 1921 total, 2,906,901 cars.

WEEK'S REVIEW OF BUSINESS AND FINANCE

United States Steel Output High-Trade Volume Gains -French Reports Good

Industrial output and trade volume in the United States this week reflect a definite improvement in the business situation as compared with a year ago. Steel makers note a slight decline in the demand for their products but reviews of the trade are inclined to reviews of the trade are inclined to reard this development as momentary.

views of the trade are inclined to regard this development as momentary, another wave of buying being expected almost immediately.

Projects under way calling for steel are numerous and of large proportions. Orders for rails, cars, ships and pipeline are reported for which steel has not as yet been contracted.

Increasing activity in these industries should, of course, be reflected in the employment situation and in a quickened flow of funds to wage earners.

The volume of business during the week ended Jan. 12, as measured by check payments, was greater than in the corresponding period of 1928, ac-cording to the Department of Com-merce. The general level of wholesale prices in that week was higher than in either the previous week or the like week a year ago. Business failures were more numerous than in the simi-lar period last year.

Car loadings, as reported for the week ended Jan. 5 were of larger volume than in either the previous week or the corresponding week of last year. As compared with 1927, a. decline was shown. Bank clearings this week gained 29.2 per cent, com-pared with the like week of 1928.

Call Money Lower The importation of a few million dol-lars in gold from Canada was offset by the earmarking of some $20,000,000 for France. Call money renewals closed the week at 6 per cent, after having touched 9 per cent in a short period of stringency which resulted from withdrawals of funds for mid-month disbursements.

The quick passing of the stringency was a factor in the development of bullish enthusiasm in the New York bullish entrusiasm in the New 101k stock market. Easier credit and excellent reports on the steel industry were reflected in an advance by United States Steel shares to a new high for all time, Talk of a stock dividend for this issue was a factor inviting hunting activity.

European Stock Markets

Reports from France for 1928 are cheerful; showing a notable improvement in basic economic conditions there. Manufacturing is reported to have made general improvement and, accept the cotton mills, the leading industries show profits. The tendency of both wages and prices is upward. An increasing volume of trade is reflected in both port traffic and carloadings.

German business conditions are reported as less satisfactory in 1928 than in the previous year. Manufactures, however, were exported in good volume.

European stock markets closed the week with a firm tone. At London there was an abundance of short-term credit and noticeable American support for some industrials. GRAINS HAVE BULL MARKET DURING WEEK

Outside Buying and Short Covering Send Up Prices Sharply-Corn Leader

CHICAGO, Jan. 19-The bull market in grain gained momentum this increasing materially. Short covering was a big factor also.

Most of the week corn was the leader, but toward the end of the period wheat and oats became independently strong.

riod wheat and oats became independently strong.

In corn, the situation in Argentina was the main factor. After light rains in the north and forepart of the week, the weather over the Argentine corn belt was clear and hot and cable advices became much more bullish, some reports indicating that the drought had caused irreparable damage already, with possibility of a madical cut in prospects unless g meral rains should come within the next few days.

Corn Market Strong

Corn Market Strong More evidence of outside buying was shown in the action of the corn market, which was able to withstand enormous profit-taking, with only small recessions.

Export business in corn has been small, but the clearances are big enough to be a factor now, 2,449,000 bushels for the week, while Argentine shipments were only 1,572,000 bushels. The domestic cash markets have held firm and country sales have not been at all heavy. Primary receipts are still running larger than a year ago of corn.

Both in corn and wheat, the possibility of farm relief legislation appears to have given confidence to buyers.

In wheat, the smaller receipts in this country and Canada have attracted more attention, especially in conjunction with the heavy clearances which continue from this country, 11,418,000 bushels for the week. Canadian country markets are less than half as much as a year ago, and primary arrivals in this country have been much less than last year. Visible stocks decreased nearly 4,000,000 bushels last week and a further decrease is expected this week. However, visible stocks have a long way ever, visible stocks have a long way to decrease before being normal.

Consumption Abroad Heavy Consumption abroad is unusually heavy, and the winter disappearance of wheat is likely to be larger than normal, as it is claimed much low grade wheat has been fed to stock.

India has also taken a good deal of wheat instead of being an exporter. Shipments from Argentina and Australia were smaller than the previous week, and Argentine exports were 1,800,000 bushels less than for the like

The finance plan is made possible by means of a $10,000,000 fund to be placed at the disposal of lumber dealers by a finance company organized somewhat along the lines of the automobile finance companies and is de-signed to encourage home building and at the same time help the lumber and building supply industry.

Funds Soon Available John H. Derr of Philadelphia. president of the association, ex-plained that the funds will be available about Feb. 1 and that all builders and remodelers of homes who have good credit ratings and whose work meets certain required standards will be eligible to borrow money. Competition of other articles sold on the installment plan, Mr. Derr said, has made it necessary for the lumber and building industry to go in for the "pay as you use" plan. In order to borrow from the finance company the builder must make a 20 per cent payment of the total construction bill on any one contract. For instance, if the build-

Government Called Temporary Pending Education of Chinese Masses

PECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONIT PEIPING (Peking) -The extent to which the students of China are domnating the Kuomintang (Nationalist Party), which is the real ruling power in the country today, is re-vealed in official figures showing that SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU 60 per cent of the 1812 members of the Kuomintang in Peiping are stu-

Government Not a Republic

While the leaders at Nanking have decided to retain the name of "the Republic of China," they are quite frank in their admission that the present Government of China is not a republic, or any form of repredredger Cambria in Heanzy Basin, sentative government. The Kuomintang undertakes to govern the country during the period of "political tutelage" described by Dr. Sun, tutelage" described by Dr. Sun, which will last until the people have been educated sufficiently to govern themselves. It becomes apparent, therefore, that through the Kuomintang, it is proposed to set up an intel-lectual aristocracy as an autocratic government until the country is ocean tug Max Berendt of the Berg-ready for real representative gov-heads of its boards. These commit-tees, in turn, are selected by the members of the party, who meet once each year. The greatest care is be-ing taken in recruiting members of ing taken in recruiting members of the party, who are the only persons entitled to any sort of vote in China during the period of political tutelage. There is some disagreement about how long this period will last. Dr. Hu Hannfin, influential leader at Nanking, recently expressed the belief that this period would not continue for more than five years. But other Kuomintang leaders believe that it will not be possible to eduthat it will not be possible to edu-cate the people for any form of rep-resentative government for perhaps 50 years.

Masses Unrepresented

The Kuomintang in Peiping is a cross-section of the party. Sixty per cent are students and 10 per cent are women. Twenty per cent hold military or official positions under the Kuomintang government. The "masses," by the very nature of qualifications for the party, are en-tirely without representation. Taking the population of Pelping at 800,000, it becomes apparent that only one person in about 400 is a member of the Kuomintang; the rest therefore have no voice in the gov-

DREDGER FOR BURMA TOWED FROM HOLLAND

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU

LONDON-The arrival of the tin Burma, marked the successful conclusion of a remarkable towing feat. The Cambria is the largest floating tin dredger in the world, being 176 feet long and 60 feet wide, with a considerable amount of overhead gear in addition to the usual bucket work of a tin dredger.

The dredger was towed by the ocean tug Max Berendt of the Bergp. m., eastern time.

A few bathers were indulging in a combined sun and sand bath, and an Airedale terrier was sitting gazing out to sea in calm content. On this scene burst a black and white mongrel at full gallop. He went up to two or three of the sand bathers, sniffed and galloped on. One watcher of the scene observed him and his first thought was "Poor chap,

A Subway Under the Sea

NCE again the scheme for constructing a Channel tunnel between England and France is warmly advocated by British business men, politicians and publicists, and this time it is possible that the last word may not be left to military experts. Many objections to it are out of date, though they are deeply rooted in national tradition. The fact that Great Britain is an island has played so large a part in shaping her history that conservative Englishmen are bound to look askance at any

That narrow strip of water which separates the English coast from the French was never impassable, but it was a sufficiently effective barrier. It may have made Great Britain "insular," but it gave her security and kept her a little aloof from the problems which disturb the nations of the Continent. Thus it happened when the scheme for a tunnel under the English Channel was first mooted in the last century it was opposed on the ground that it would tend to destroy Britain's island advantages and expose her to attack by a land power. When later (1907) it was definitely submitted to the British Government it was rejected on strategic grounds; and again in 1914 the imperial defense committee advised that "strategic conditions" had not so altered as to justify a reversal of its conclusions. Since then, the development of air power appears to most persons to have completely changed the position. The Channel provides no barrier against aircraft, and the problem of blocking the tunnel in an emergency would seem to be negligible compared with the impossibility of closing the vast spaces of the air. Yet, in 1924, when the Labor Government submitted the same proposal to the committee of imperial defense, it was once again advised to reject it.

Since then, however, British opinion has been moving. Business men have become keenly awake to the great advantage of real through communication with the Continent. The breaking down of all unnecessary obstacles is essential to the fullest development of trade. The direct linking up of the British railways with the railway system of Europe would be an immense encouragement to travel and a stimulus

It is a promising sign of the trend of public opinion in England that most critics are inclined to ridicule the overcautious military view that the scheme contains "elements of danger." They consider that so slight a risk is negligible compared with the great advantages which the scheme offers. Moreover, its adoption would be a gesture of confidence in the good will of France and would itself contribute to friendly relations. When Canada and the United States can safely leave their long frontier undefended, common sense suggests that Britain and France should be on a status which would relieve both of them from anxiety arising out of joint possession of a subway beneath the sea.

A Wise Medical Warning

AT A season such as the present, when so A many reports are being circulated regarding the alleged prevalence of the epidemic Influenza, any authoritative opinion tending to show the fallacy of much that is publicly believed concerning it is more than welcome. Hence the statement made recently by the health commissioner of the city of New York, Dr. Shirley W. Wynne, in answer to criticisms that had been directed against his department for not sending out an epidemic alarm of the disease is particularly timely. Said the commissioner, if an alarm were spread, every cold would be classed as influenza, and business would suffer a heavy loss in decreased operations. He added that he and other health officials were not convinced that an epidemic existed; nor did he believe that the disease had reached proportions large enough to warrant an alarm.

Looking at the situation from another point of view, information is at hand that the terrifying descriptions that have been given in some schools of the effects of this epidemic have. aside altogether from the disease, themselves produced untoward results. The implanting in the thoughts of the young of vividly drawn pictures of symptoms, with undue emphasis upon the possibility of fatality resulting, has a detrimental effect upon many children that is difficult to compute. Moreover, where the desire is mainly to impress the thought with the necessity for following out certain lines of alleged prevention and cure, it is easy for an overenthusiastic teacher to depart from the strict lines of fact. In consequence the child easily obtains an inordinately bad impression which often takes so strong a hold upon him that it becomes exceedingly difficult to eradicate it and is likely to manifest itself in many discordant conditions at a later date.

On the other hand, the removal of fear would do much to offset the advance of any epidemic. This fact is becoming more and more widely recognized, and the commissioner's statement, above referred to, should be helpful in this particular instance. Application of common sense to the general situation and the quieting | river states joined Chicago and Illinois in deof the feeling of alarm that is so easily aroused at such a time would prove helpful factors in combating this or any other "epidemic."

Mr. Hoover's First Act

T ONE stroke Mr. Hoover has disposed of A the theory that platforms are made to get in on and not to stand on, and has also given bright promise of approaching the prohibition problem in a strictly scientific and efficient fashion. Impelled, of course, by the prospect that Congress was about to consider legislation offered by Senator Wesley Jones and Senator Edge for the establishment of a commission of inquiry into the effects of the prohibition law, the President-elect has called attention to the fact that he promised in his speeches during the campaign that such an inquiry would be put on foot. He announces now that one of his first acts will be to ask Congress to establish a commission, consisting of economists, business men, educators, and engineers, to make a comprehensive study not merely of the measure of enforcement, and the difficulty involved in it, but of the moral and economic effects of prohibition so far as it is enforced, and the necessities for the correction of government methods of enforcement. No better promise of proper handling of this great problem could possibly be presented to the people at this moment.

Every sincere prohibitionist, every real enemy of the liquor power, every citizen who believes that no use of alcoholic stimulants is helpful, and that the common overuse or abuse of them is enormously hurtful, will welcome this promise of an investigation. Ten years ago the business of selling liquor was, after years of trial, convicted of being an infamy. As a result the steady and determined purpose of prohibiting it was incorporated in the constitutional law of the United States. Today the friends of liquor have put prohibition on trial. Instead of being on the defensive, they are virulent in attack. They ascribe to the prohibition law evils which really proceed wholly from the determination of corrupt and lawless men to violate that law. They attempt to formulate their own evidence in support of their program of nullification, and then point to that evidence as conclusive.

Everyone knows that the prohibition law is violated. Intelligent people know more than this, that its violation is not nearly so widespread as is the clamor about it. It is part of the strategy of the anti-prohibitionists to magnify the extent to which the law is violated or evaded. Yet it is an undeniable fact that the measure of enforcement is continually becoming greater. The prohibition unit of the Treasury Department in its official report declares that "the country is going forward with prohibition, not backward with it." It goes on to assert that smuggling has been greatly reduced in the last year; that diversion of liquor under permits of various kinds to beverage purposes has become almost negligible, and that, while the greater supply of liquor in the market comes through smuggling and through manufacture from raw materials, it is evident that the latter source is being steadily dried up. The prohibition officials, while claiming steady progress in the direction of enforcement, appeal for additional educational movements in order to decrease the number of new recruits to the drinking class. It is obvious that the inquiry proposed will supply a great mass of material for such educational ends. There is perhaps no subject before the Amer-

more widespread than on this question of the duty of the Nation as a whole toward prohibition and the drink habit. To judge from the clamor of the professional wets, one might think that the whole Nation was drinking itself into dipsomania, and only awaiting a chance to overthrow the law. But so far as the latter proposition is concerned, there have been five Congresses elected since prohibition went into effect and each one has shown a greater strength for the prohibition forces. The latest election not merely defeated the outstanding candidate of the wets for President, but turned out of the Senate the two most vociferous advocates of a return to the old-time system of licensing the sale of intoxicants. And as to the extent to which there is evasion and violation, though it may be admitted that both are deplorably common, the citizen who is interested will do well to rely more upon his own personal observation than upon the stories assiduously circulated by the friends of liquor and their press. Do you, the reader of these words, see more of intoxication on the street or in public places than you did ten years ago? Do speakeasies confront you at every turn as did the ancient saloon, and are your nostrils greeted two or three times on each block in the down-town section of your city with the fetid aroma coming out from the drinking places? Do you observe that more temptation is put in the way of youth by the squalid and sordid practices of the bootlegger than there was in the days of the brilliantly and attractively lighted barroom? If every citizen will put questions of this sort to himself, relying on his own observations rather than upon indirect evidence for his answer, he will be to an extent a commission of inquiry. His findings will doubtless encourage him until the Hoover commission shall have had a chance to report.

The Lake Diversion Decision

THE United States Supreme Court's decision calling for gradual reduction in Chicago's diversion of Lake Michigan water marks a long step toward settlement of a controversy involving thirteen states and two nations. For more than twenty years Canada and the states bordering the Great Lakes have protested against Chicago taking water to carry sewage and ships to the Mississippi basin and the Gulf of Mexico. It has been shown that this diversion lowered lake levels about six inches, thus lessening the depth of harbors as far away as Montreal and causing annual losses to shipping and water power interests that run well into the millions of dollars.

This water also raised the Mississippi River six inches between Cairo and St. Louis, and six fending diversion, in the suit brought by the six lake states. The court's ruling holds that the War Department's permit allowing Chicago 8500 cubic feet of water a second in addition to 1500 for domestic use is legal, but declares lake levels must be restored and diversion reduced to the flow necessary to maintain navigation in the Chicago River-which the city has made to run backward, out of rather than into the lake. Engineers have placed that amount at between 1000 and 4000 second feet. Chicago is to be given time-estimated at from five to ten years necessary to construct sewage disposal plants. Previously the city has found little support for its contentions in Congress, and resort now to legislation to alter the effect of the decision appears unlikely.

Restoration of lake levels may be expected to satisfy protesting states, but Canada has rigidly maintained that no diversion should be made from boundary waters. Any leak in the Great Lakes cuts into Canadian hydroelectric resources regardless of lake levels, and this claim may require further adjustment. Possibly the courts have gone as far as they can and the rest must be left to the engineers and statesmen. Two years ago Herbert Hoover pointed out that "litigation produces feeling, but not water," and urged the construction of weirs in the Niagara and St. Clair rivers to raise the lake levels. It is quite possible that efforts of this kind will show that the interests of the Lakesto-the-Gulf waterway and the St. Lawrence project are not so much antagonistic as complementary, with water enough for both.

In any event, this court decision goes far toward adjusting a question which in some parts of the globe-where states are nations-might have led to serious disputes, and it foreshadows what may be done in the way of peaceful settlements when nations shall confine their fighting to legal battles before a world tribunal.

Bench and Bar

TEARS ago, in the United States, when it I was comparatively easy for one seeking admission to the bar to qualify as a member of the legal profession, it was not difficult, if the person enjoying such distinction deported himself in a manner contrary to the code of ethics established, to deprive him of his professional status. Aspirants were accepted then, according to a custom which still prevails in many sections of the West, at their own estimate of themselves. The testing period succeeded, rather than preceded, their enrollment as officers of the court duly licensed to practice. The processes and methods of disbarment were almost as simple and as easily applied as those of examination and admission.

With the passing years, and with the tendency of men and women to engage more generally in professional pursuits, especially the law, the effort has been to make more difficult, or at least more exacting, the procedure of enrollment. Likewise, it unfortunately appears, it is no longer a simple undertaking to eliminate from the ranks those who, for whatever reason, may have been proved unworthy or unfit. In some of the larger cities, particularly, combinations seem to have been effected which, when they include vulnerable members of the bench and practitioners of questionable probity, defy the efforts of honest judges and reputable members of bar associations to purge the profession of

There are thoughtful and serious observers and commentators who insist that the difficulty has been caused by the continued tendency to delegate to lawyers the authority to enact laws. They point to the fact that in Congress and in state legislatures a majority of those in positions of power and influence are members of the legal profession. But it should be realized that the inability of bar associations to deal effectively with the problems which they face is not due to any actual defect in the laws, in the code of ethics of their organizations, or any lack of desire to purge their profession of undesirables. They are halted and hindered by powerful combinations of influential officials and advocates who have succeeded in establishing themselves in strategic offensive and defensive positions.

The inclination is to suspect that in the effort to raise the standard of intellectual qualifications for admission to the bar there has been overlooked what now must be admitted to be an equally vital consideration. If this oversight or omission is to be corrected, as it unquestionably must be, the initiative should come from the courts and the members of the bar. Conditions which recently have been disclosed, for instance, in Massachusetts and New York, can hardly surprise those who should have long been cognizant of them. Exposures of this kind tend to destroy confidence in both bench and bar, thus weakening, at least for the time being, one of democracy's strong defenses.

It is within the power of the bar associations to purge themselves and thus restore their organizations to public esteem. The cleansing process, if applied otherwise, would, even if saved from being inexpert and bungling, be humiliating to the bar as an institution.

Where Legend Lives Again

CARCASSONNE, FRANCE
O THE American traveler who traces, with a natural pride of patriotism, the eventful history of his country to the landing of the Pilgrims at that remote date, 1620, and looks ahead to see Boston's tercentenary coming in one short year, Carcassonne is unbelievable. Though the Middle Ages have bequeathed many remnants to the landscape of the Old World, and symbols are to be found on every European countryside, neither guidebook nor imagination prepares one for the incom-

We came upon Carcassonne as the evening sun hung tentatively above the crown of a distant mountain, as if reluctant to bid La Cité another night's farewell. Its crimson rays spread a vivid glow over the valley of the Aude. The Cevennes stretched to the horizon on the one side, the crystal peaks of the Pyrenees met our view on the other. A forest of towers, tall and pointed, round and square, rose to the sky before us. There stood the walled town of the Romans, the Goths, and the Visigoths, majestically astride the lone valley which leads from the Mediterranean to the Atlantic. A city, gray like the mists from the mountains which long protected it. A city vast but minutely perfect, as if hewn from a single mass of granite but yesterday. There was Carcassonne, and legend lived again.

Carcassonne stands not as a symbol of the Middle Ages. It is the Middle Ages.

Years and scores of years to Carcassonne have been as fleeting minutes on the table of time, for there before us, as we neared the approach to the stately Narbonnaise gate, appeared this City of Fancy, its fifty towers of massive gray stone piercing the sky, its double line of ramparts stretching out on either side to encompass La Cité in an unbroken bulwark, and as we crossed the moat over the creaking drawbridge which leads under the twin towers of the Porte Narbonnaise our City of Fancy become a City of Fact. All we had ever imagined of medievalism rested within our reach, as real and as tangible as the Statue of Liberty and the Golden Gate. The spindles which once locked the old bridge were still in their places, as they had been when mailed feet trod beneath these walls centuries ago, and towers and turrets, bastions and barbecans in vast variety caught the sweep of the eye. There could be no disbelieving Carcassonne The fact of Carcassonne was more enthralling than its fancy. The record of vesterday's centuries became the living experience of today.

As we made our way from rampart to turret to tower in a circle of nearly a mile about the inner fortifications, tracing our steps from the Tour de Justice to the Tour Visigoth, to the Tour de L'Inquisition, and in and out of the intricate defenses, we were able to discover in a single panoramic glance the whole gamut of medieval military architecture. Much of the outer wall remains as the work of the Romans during their earliest occupation of this important vantage point. The Visigoth towers and the inner city wall, with their bases either square or roughly rounded to support the defense works of the fifth century, rest upon Roman substructions, many signs of which are soon perceived.

Further defenses were added by Louis IX and Philippele-Hardi, and these newer battlements, combined with the precise restorations by the great architect, Viollet-le-Duc, through whose skill and efforts many of the crumbling | needs but one Carcassonne, memorabilia of France's Middle Ages have been preserved, leave Carcassonne, though battered and besieged, virtually intact and unshaken, the open sesame to a twentieth century picture of 2000 years of history.

Twenty centuries ago, in the seventieth year of Julius Cæsar, Carcassonne was already a community of wide repute and was classed with cities said to be "noble" and elected." But peace reigned in the valley of the Aude for full 400 years, and as history in those dark days was prone, no doubt more so than today, to confine its chronicle to the exploits of the battlefield, little is known of the fate of Carcassonne until, with the disasters of the Empire, the Franks took it, only to lose it shortly to the returning Romans. If its history of peace has been a blank page, its history of war has been a vast volume of invasion and siege as the victor pursued the conquered through the walls of this enduring citadel. And Carcassonne stands today not only a treasure to the archæolo gist, not only a delight to the traveler, but a danger signal to nations who are seeking to tread the road to lasting peace. The Middle Ages had no League of Nations, no Locarno pact, no Briand-Kellogg multilateral treaty, and it is to be hoped that the world will need only one Carcassonne.

Because the natural upland on which La Cité was built overlooks the full sweep of the winding Aude and commands the threshold of the routes to the ocean and the eastern passes through the Pyrenees, Carcassonne has been a strategic point in southern France through all the ages. Rome built it. The Visigoths took it. The Saracens and the Franks fought over it. It suffered greatly from the wastage of the Albigensian War. From 759 to the thirteenth century counts and viscounts ruled it, until the cruel and crusading Simon de Montfort, by either exterminating, subduing or converting these forerunners of the Reformation, was victorious after a memorable siege of five days in 1209. With the passing of Earl Simon, Carcassonne was permanently united to the Crown of France.

From the outer wall of Carcassonne and separated from by the Aude, stretches the Ville Basse, or Lower Town, which came into being by the ironic whim of King Louis IX. It seems, as our good-natured guide, a French soldier of the World War, was able to describe to us, in such transparent phrases that the most feeble linguist could understand, that after one of the hereditary counts, leading an attack to wrest Carcassonne back from the French Crown, failed in his attempt, those who had aided him within La Cité were banished, but their entreaties to be allowed to live within sight of the walls were granted by the King. And Ville Basse is the home of their descendants today. 1 1 1

Centuries ago the shock of trumpets and the heavy tramp of armed guards on the cobblestones of the narrow streets echoed within the walled city of Carcassonne. Momentary peace was but a respite to prepare for another attack, a battle of defense one day, and battle of conquest another. But this evening, as the declining sun dropped slowly behind the distant mountain cap, its we saw in the Lists, where fierce tournaments were held of old, a peaceful peasant woman raking a frugal crop of hay, and a diminutive donkey dozed on the ground near by, waiting to carry it home. Surely, the world need but one Carcassonne.

Notes From Geneva

GENEVA THE celebrated Polish pianist, Ignace Jan Paderewski, whose attachment to Switzerland is well known-for many years he has been the happy owner of a htful country house and park at Morges in the delightful Canton of Vaud-put his art recently once more at the service of a good cause. In order to contribute toward the endowment of the city of Lausanne with a concert hall, he consented to give two concerts in Lausanne Cathedral, the entire proceeds of which were to be devoted to this purpose. The two performances proved a great success and the cathedral was crowded on both nights with an audience that was attracted from many parts of Switzerland. Numbers came from Geneva and other neighboring towns, while all the members of the Polish delegation to the League of Nations availed themselves of this opportunity to pay their tribute to the great artist and patriot.

Should the women of Geneva have the right to act as auxiliary or deputy pastors of the national church? This question has given rise to quite a lively controversy in Geneva. It was argued in the press and at public meetings by pastors who took opposite sides. Women pastors from Swiss cantons, where the female pastorate is already allowed (Vaud and Zurich), came specially to Geneva to give their experiences and plead for the appointment women pastors in this Canton. Finally the members of the National Church of Geneva, including women members who have the right to vote, adopted by a large majority the proposal granting to women graduates in theology the right to become auxiliary or deputy pastors, and perhaps some day a woman pastor will appear in Calvin's pulpit. What would John Knox have said to

Although Geneva is to lose the greater part of the Ariana Park to the League of Nations in order that the new Palace of Nations may be built there, it can well afford to do so, because few cities have so many charming parks and open spaces. Moreover, in exchange for the site in the Ariana Park the League is giving to the city of Geneva the gardens originally purchased for the new palace which, added to the little park of Mon Repos, will now make a delightful open prospect by the lakeside for the people of Geneva. The museum in the Ariana Park, which was given to the town by Gustave Révilliod, will still be retained by Geneva. It contains an interesting collection of pictures and objets d'art which M. Révilliod collected in the course of his travels in the

There was another citizen of Geneva called William Favre who made an equally splendid donation to his native city by leaving his park of La Grange and the big villa in which he lived there to his fellow townsmen. The estate at the time was valued at 7,000,000 francs and the house stands just as Mr. Favre left it, full of his furniture, books and works of art. It is strange to find it uninhabited, but on occasion it is the scene of official receptions. In the grounds of La Grange are the remains of a Roman villa, of which the foundations have been explored. It must have been a very extensive building, for it contained a splendid suite of baths, the site of which has been located about a hundred yards from the villa, which was built originally in the clearing of a forest. Its owner must have had a very different view over the surroundings of Geneva than that offered by the gently sloping meadows and tall conifer trees which face one from the portico of this Roman dwelling today. In addition to these parks there is a charming open space in the suburb of Eaux-Vives which rises gradually from the lake to a hill crowned by a restaurant in a grove of trees. Finally everyone who comes to Geneva walks in the Jardin anglais, so well known to members of the League as they drive down to the Salle de la Réformation to the meetings of the Assembly.

The winter season began early in December this year in Switzerland, and the first fall of snow came before many visitors had arrived to take part in the winter sports. Thus the Swiss skiers and skaters had their native mountains and skating rinks almost to themselves for a few weeks and even the fields round Geneva were covered with snow for Christmas time. There is scarcely any more delightful experience than to pay a visit to one of the high mountain places when the winter sports are in full swing. Everything is admirably organized for the season's visitors, stretches of meadow being flooded to give smooth ice to the skaters, while bobsleigh runs and skiing platforms seem to pop up like magic in the land-scape. But one never can tell when the "foehn," the warm south wind so much dreaded by those who come for winter sports, will sweep across Switzerland, spoiling snow and ice in all but the highest places. It played a sorry trick on the international sports at St. Moritz last year by unexpectedly arriving on the scene before the program had been finished, and before the new year it is generally not safe to count on one's favorite ski runs, although the snow may fall for a few days in abundance. The second fortnight in January and the first fortnight in February can, however, in nine years out of ten, be relied on to give good sport.

Swiss trade is certainly picking up. October was a particularly good month, with an export value of 208,-664,000 francs, and if November showed a decline on this figure, that is according to the usual expectation for that month. Both the machine industry and the watch industry have been doing better and a Swiss firm recently cut out all rivals for a contract for electrical machinery offered by the city of Edinburgh (Scotland). Its bid was £50,000 less than that of any of its British rivals, and it left the British engineering industry fairly gasping, for there did not appear to be any profit for the Swiss firm in such a low figure. The value of Swiss imports also shows a rising tendency over the monthly average of last year, and the larger amount spent on food and raw material is a sign of increased purchasing power.

Switzerland may be congratulated on the fact that it gives its workers a higher actual wage than they had before the war. The skilled workers, in spite of the rise in the cost of living, earn wages today which show a 30 per cent increase in real value. This is certainly a tribute to the high skill of the workers in the chief industries of Switzerland, the watch makers and machine workers holding their own with the most efficient workers of the great industrial countries of Europe.

Singing About Peace

TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

The Kellogg pact is giving a new outlet for a more animated discussion of the subject of peace. In the campaign of gradual education that will change the state of thought of those who do not yet see the advantages of peace over those of war, the written and the spoken word will help some. But don't you think that by adding the influence of music, singing about peace is more apt to leave a stronger impression on the consciousness of the people? At their first singing entertainment this season, in Town Hall, on Saturday evening, January 26, members of the People's Chorus of New York will sing the famous poem of John Greenleaf Whittier, set to music by the well-known British composer, Geoffrey Shaw. The poem reads as follows:

O brother man! fold to thy heart thy brother; Where pity dwells, the peace of God is there; To worship rightly is to love each other, Each smile a hymn, each kindly deed a prayer.

Follow with reverent steps the great example Of Him whose holy work was "doing good:" So shall the wide earth seem our Father's temple, Each loving life a psalm of gratitude.

Then shall all shackles fall; the stormy clangor Of wild war music o'er the earth shall cease; Love shall tread out the baleful fire of anger, And in its ashes plant the tree of peace!

The members of the chorus will sing the first two stanzas, and the audience, which will receive a copy of the music and words, as a climax, will be invited to join in the singing of the third stanza.

It is good to get the audience into the habit of doing something also themselves, as a part of their public entertainments. In view of this timely subject, we hope that you will find space to publish this letter in The Christian Science Monitor, inducing all the people to come, and in this way co-operate in making this habit gradually world-wide.
